War Time Hero a Pauper.

It was generally believed that when Mrs. John C. Kealy was induced to leave her former home in the latest addition to the Naval academy grounds that the last private citizen had departed from that area and that the United States government had full swing to carry on its improvements.
This, however, is not the case, for a little hovel inside the academy walls is still occupied by another Annapolis notable, John Jackson. Although arrangements have been completed by which he will move to other quarters within a few days.

The man, John Jackson, who is still a tenant by sufferance on the grounds of the academy, although now reduced to the lowest depths of poverty, was a United States sailor during the civil war, and performed a feat of splendid daring and courage, which was recognized by the government and a medal commemorative of it bestowed upon him.

The feat took place during the blockade of Charleston, S. C., by the Federal fleet. Some United States vessels, the largest of which was the Miantona-mah, upon which Jackson was a sailor, had crossed the bar into the harbor and could only retrace their course by the same narrow channel by which they had come. The Confederates in the shore batteries discovered this, and as the tide was at a flood they launched three torpedoes chained together, so as to float down on the Federal ships and destroy them. The torpedoes were the kind which exploded on contact with some object. Jackson volunteered to swim toward the torpedoes and un-screw the cap which was intended to explode them. This feat he accomplished, though with the greatest danger of meeting death from a premature explosion or from the shots of the Confederates. To accomplish it he was forced to dive and do a part of the work under water.—New York Times.

PROVISION FOR HAWAII AT OREGON CENTENNIAL

Act of Congress Devotes the United States Buildings In Part to Exhibit From Hawaii.

Editor Advertiser: Hawaii is given an unprecedented opportunity of making an exhibit at a universal fair, by special provision in an Act of Congress authorizing the Federal Government to participate in the Lewis and Clark Centennial Exposition at Portland, Oregon, next summer. Such provision is that of accommodation for a Hawaiian exhibit.

From the wording of the section relating to buildings, it may not be too much to expect that, with prompt action on the part of our people, an exclusively Hawaiian building to cost anywhere from $15,000 to $25,000 might be obtained out of the Federal appropriation. If not that, at all events the Territory of Hawaii will not be meanly treated in the matter of space when the quarter of a million dollars for United States buildings, in part specifically devoted to a Hawaiian exhibit, has been expended.

With accommodation for Hawaii provided without cost, doubtlessly at the very center of the Fair, the expense of making a telling exhibit would be comparatively trifling. There is a fairly perfected plan extant from the defeated purpose of a St. Louis exhibit, with probably also some of the imperishable articles collected yet available.
Indeed, the magnificent educational exhibit prepared for the Louisiana Purchase Exposition is not only intact but mostly packed already for shipment.
Transportation, with steamers direct to Northwestern ports, ought to be inexpensive.

Whatever may be said for and against the value of exhibits at great fairs, the affirmative in this particular case ought to have manifold force in the circumstances. Discussions, more or less desultory, arise at both ends of the line every now and again upon the question of promoting trade between Hawaii and ports on the Northwest Pacific Coast. An exposition in that quarter would afford an excellent chance for Hawaii to illustrate to business men and consumers there just what Hawaiian products might, with adequate transportation facilities, be placed in that market for exchange with the lumber, grain and manufactured articles of the great Northwest country.

The title of the Act of Congress referred to, being Chapter 153 of the statutes of 1904, reads as follows:

"An Act to authorize the Government of the United States to participate in celebrating the one hundredth anniversary of the exploration of the Oregon country by Captains Meriwether Lewis and William Clark in the years eighteen hundred and four, eighteen hundred and five, and eighteen hundred and six, and for other purposes."

And this is the section relating to buildings:

"Sec. 4. That the Secretary of the Treasury shall cause a suitable building or buildings to be erected on the site selected for the Lewis and Clark Centennial Exposition for the said Government exhibit, including a suitable building for an exhibit of the United States Life-Saving Service, the forestry and irrigation building herein referred to, and also cause to be erected a suitable building or buildings on said site for the use of the district of Alaska, the Territory of Hawaii, the Philippine Islands, and also oriental and oceanic countries that may desire an exhibit of their products and resources at said exposition."

The section goes on to provide an appropriation of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars ($250,000) for the buildings mentioned, including preparation of grounds therefor and the lighting thereof, also for the disposition of the structures at the close of the exposition. At least one distinct building is to be for forestry and irrigation exhibits, as a reference in the foregoing quotation shows.

On its own part, the United States Government will have an exhibit partially selected from that now at St. Louis.
The Act provides for drawing from the treasures of the Smithsonian Institution and various Federal departments to enrich the national display at Portland. Hawaii, as already shown, has the privilege of resting right under the wing of the American eagle, so that the isolation of the Territory which the St. Louis management at times threatened, during negotiations for a site carried on by our authorities, is rendered entirely impossible.

A Novel Display.

The two large center windows in the handsome store of Kerr & Co., on Ala-keia street, have this week been devoted to the honor of the Healan and Myrtle Boat Clubs respectively. Some very artistic draping effects are displayed in both windows in the colors of the clubs. Two large mirrors representing water with a crew from both clubs going for all they are worth, together with the judge with his watch and pistol in hand, make a very pleasing effect.

This is altogether something new from the ordinary in the way of window trimming and is well worth going round to Alakeia street to see.

vice, commencing Sunday, June 12th, anae. None but first class tickets will be accepted. Round trip tickets, $2.00.

tions indulged in both morning and afternoon.

EX-GOVERNOR BAKER VISITING THE CITY

Col. John T. Baker, the last Governor of the Island of Hawaii under the monarchy, is in town as a witness in one of the Parker Ranch suits. He says that ranching at Waiimea, in which he is now engaged, agrees with him splendidly and he does look as if it did. Yesterday he met a former colleague of the Legislature of 1890 and another acquaintance of that time both at once at the front of the Judiciary building, which caused him to remark on the few old friends he met since his arrival last Saturday.

"Just one yesterday, and you two today," he said as his stalwart frame shook with boyish mirth. Then he repeated a piece of rally which he uttered in English at the close of a long native harangue in the Legislature one day, and his former colleague laughed heartily as he said he remembered the incident. The other old friend, though not a member of the Legislature, was the only one present who understood the rally when it was uttered, for it was directed at himself and borrowed from a story told at his expense by the late Paul Neumann under Mr. Baker's roof in Hilo.

There are few Hawaiians today who look to be chiefs on the model of the older time, imposing in physique and commanding in demeanor, so strikingly as does Col. Baker. His late brother, Robert Hoanli Baker, a Governor of Maui, was the model for the Kameha-meha statue.
